IN RESEARCH WHICH I HAVE RECENTLY carried out on the Lake family estates in Aston Clinton I have sought to lift the curtain of obscurity which has hung over the origins of the house which Sir Anthony de Rothschild and his family made their country residence from 1853 to 1923. Material in The Rothschild Archive has proved invaluable in the search for the true story. Aston Clinton lies beside the A41 (formerly the Sparrows Erne Turnpike Road from Bushey Heath (W atford) to Aylesbury). The village, and most of the park of the former Aston Clinton House to the south of it, stands on the level, water-retaining surface of the Gault Clay. However, the south-eastern margin of the park, where it was bounded by the Wendover Arm of the Grand Junction Canal, stands on the beginning of the better drained gentle rise into the Chiltern Hills. The church of St Michael and All Angels is between the A41 and the park.

The Lord of the Manor from 1760 to 1808 was Gerard Lake (1744-1808). He had a long military career in which he saw service in America, Ireland and India. He was elected as an MP for Aylesbury in 1790 and 1796. Raised to the peerage in 1804 as a baron and in 1807 as a viscount, Lake took the title of 1st Viscount of Delhi, Leswarree and Aston Clinton. When Gerard Lake inherited Aston Clinton the manor house was moated and was located next door to the church of St Michael and All Angels. It later became a farmhouse known as Church Farm and was replaced by a larger manor house, built half a mile to the south east, close to what was to become the site of the Grand Junction Canal. The exact date of the new house, and who built it, are unknown but it was sometime between 1770, when Church Farm was still the manor house, and 1793 when, on the plans for the proposed canal, a house was marked as ‘seat of General Lake’. It is possible that Lake had planned to build a new house in 1785 when he applied to stop up a section of the lower end of the road, now known as Aston Hill, where it would have passed through the grounds of the proposed house. There is evidence that George, Prince of Wales, who was a close friend of Lord Lake, was using the house as a sporting residence between 1789 and 1792. After Gerard Lake's death in 1808 his son Francis Gerard (1772-1836) inherited the title and the estate and used the house as his country residence. Francis died in 1836 without heirs and the title and estate passed to his younger brother Warwick (1783-1848). Either for family or financial reasons Warwick decided to sell the estate and put it up for sale in 1836. The sale attracted the attention of the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos. At that time the estate was of 1,055 acres valued at £1,000 per annum, and was seen by the Duke as an investment to pay off debts. Due to the acute financial difficulties of the Duke the purchase could not be completed until he had sold the Norton Estate in Hampshire and it was not until 1838, after Warwick Lake had threatened to withdraw from the sale, that the purchase was finally concluded at £23,426.

In the 1836 sale catalogue the house was described as 'a shooting box' with extensive plantations, pleasure grounds and park, with shaded walks and fish pond. The house contained four best bedrooms and five secondary and servants' sleeping rooms. On the ground floor there was a 'cheerful' drawing room with a bow window and a dining room. There were servants' quarters and an enclosed yard with wash-house and laundry, a double coach-house, stables and loose box. Among other buildings were a blacksmith's shop, a forge and a carpenter's shop. Church Farm (the old manor house) was one of the farms included in the sale.

When the Duke's son, the Marquis of Chandos sold the estate in 1848 it was described as a valuable freehold and tithe-free estate, situated in a beautiful part of the County of Buckinghamshire consisting of the Manor of Aston Clinton. Included in the sale was a 'newly-erected and most desirable brick-built and stuccoed sporting residence, suited for a family of respectability, with offices, gardens, orchard, pleasure ground and small park, and the Home Farm, Church and Hill Farms, with suitable agricultural buildings, the whole estate about nine hundred acres'. Kelly's Directory of 1854 refers to the Duke of Buckingham having re-built the house but as no evidence to support this claim has been found I suggested that he carried out repairs and made some changes to the layout of the rooms. The bedrooms and sleeping rooms described above had become six principal bedrooms and three servants' rooms. It still had a 'cheerful' drawing room with a 'window to the floor' and a dining room. The only addition to the description in the 1848 sale catalogue is a portico entrance. The small-scale plans that accompany both the 1836 and 1848 catalogues show an identical scatter of buildings on the site, and in the same location as those shown on the Enclosure Commissioner's Working Map of 1814. Some changes to the layout of the grounds are apparent. The 1836 plan does not show the drive down from the turnpike but the 1848 does, terminating at the largest building.
Baron Mayer de Rothschild attended one of the many sales of the Duke of Buckingham's estates in October 1848. The Aston Clinton estate was due to be the principal property for auction at £25,000 but was withdrawn. When the estate came up for sale again in July 1849 the Rothschilds had discussed a possible purchase within the family. They agreed however to offer no more than £26,000, as “It is not like a fancy place” and should be treated as an investment only. Here is evidence to suggest that it was Lionel de Rothschild who made the purchase although it was his brother Sir Anthony who decided to make it his country home. Sir Anthony finally moved into it in 1853, once the pressures of the London and Paris banking houses allowed, with his wife Louise (née Montefiore) and their daughters Constance (b. 1843) and Annie (b. 1844). Later, Constance wrote that her father had been fortunate to find a small country house in Aston Clinton, formerly the home of the Lake family. This, of course, is further evidence that the Duke of Buckingham had not demolished Lord Lake's house.

The smallness of the house, which Lady de Rothschild particularly found unsuitable, prompted Sir Anthony to obtain tenders for enlarging it. He employed George Henry Stokes, Sir Joseph Paxton’s son-in-law, as architect and George Miers as builder just as Mayer de Rothschild had at Mentmore a few years earlier. Tantalisingly no plans or drawings of Aston Clinton House and the proposed extensions have been found but a copy of an Indenture and Specification of 1855, and accounts from George Miers for 1856-1857, all in The Rothschild Archive, describe in detail the work carried out. Some suggestions have been made in the past that the house was demolished at this stage and a new one built but the Indenture proves the supposition to be false. The Indenture states that “all the old works of every kind interfered with by the alterations to be made good in all respects; the old portion of the building to be thoroughly repaired...”. By 1856 alterations to both the interior and exterior of the existing house had begun in order to accommodate the extensions. Alterations were made to the eaves of the old house to form new cornices; a parapet was added; the roof leaded, and air flues added under the house. Doors in the old building were rehung, floors repaired, woodwork repainted. Chimney stacks were changed in size and position and the exterior walls were cemented. Alterations to the old porch were made, steps were added to the outside of the drawing and dining room windows and inside the house some of the rooms were converted. The extensions added included what was described as a ‘Billiard Room building’, a new dining room, new offices and a new conservatory. The sum of £5,179.11.8 appears on one of the accounts from Myers which may be the total amount for the contract; however an invoice dated 1857-1859 from John Lee, Surveyor, to Sir Anthony states that an agreement had been reached with M r. Miers on a reduction in the schedule of prices, due to the fall in the cost of materials, but no amended figure is given. A drawing by Alice de Rothschild shows the front of the house in the 1860s after the alterations and extensions were completed.

George Devey took over from Stokes, from 1864 to 1877, the continuing works of improvement to the mansion and designed various cottages and the park gates. Sir Anthony died in 1876 and in 1877 Constance married Cyril Flower and they made Aston Clinton their home during the autumn and winter. Lucy Cohen refers to the reorganisation of the stables and the building of an additional wing by Cyril Flower but gives no date or source. It may have been sometime during the late 1870s or early 1880s when this work was carried out.

Towards the end of the 19th century the old manor house, Church Farm, was demolished and a kitchen garden created on its site. Alice de Rothschild’s 1863 drawing of the view towards the church, from the grounds of Aston Clinton House, is perhaps the only surviving illustration of Church Farm. The 1877 Ordnance Survey map shows buildings still at Church Farm but by the 1900 Ordnance Survey map the site had been cleared to make way for the kitchen garden with its extensive range of glasshouses and living quarters for staff. The kitchen garden is described in the 1923 sale catalogue as being in a high state of cultivation and including a fig house, vinery, peach and cherry houses.
By the time the Rothschilds sold the estate in 1923 the house had grown from its humble origins to a classical mansion with seven reception rooms, billiard room, ball room, 13 principal bed and dressing rooms, 17 secondary and servants' bedrooms, four bath rooms and complete domestic offices. There was stabling for 32 horses and two lodges had been built. The sale catalogue is illustrated with pictures of the sumptuous interior of the house and the formal gardens.

After the death of Lady de Rothschild in 1910 Aston Clinton reverted to the Rothschild Estate and Lionel's three sons, Nathaniel (first Lord Rothschild), Alfred and Leopold jointly inherited the interest. Constance and Annie remained in occupation and kept the estate going until the 1st World War, when it was given over to the Commanding Officer of the Twenty-first Division, then encamped on the Halton estate, and it was finally sold in 1923. By this time Lionel's three sons had died and the Hon. N. Charles Rothschild, Nathaniel's son, had inherited the estate. However he died in October 1923 and the sale was dealt with by his executors. Dr. Albert Edward Bredin Crawford purchased the house and grounds (only) for £15,000. Dr. Crawford was a schoolmaster and used the house as a school for backward boys. Evelyn Waugh was a master at the school for a short time from 1925 and in his diaries referred to it as "an inconceivably ugly house but a lovely park" and "a house of echoing and ill-lit passages and a frightful common-room". The school did not prosper and by 1932 the house was on the market again. The general remarks in the sale catalogue of that year describe it as eminently suited for a club, school or institution. A valuation list of 1934, updated to 1954, shows the changing fortunes of the house over the twenty years. It lists the owners as Howard Park Hotel, E.K. Cole (Echo Radios), H.M. Treasury, Thames Side Development Properties Ltd. and finally Green Park Hotel.

A brochure for the Howard Park Hotel advertised "A week-end spent in these luxurious quiet surroundings is well spent, and the hours will slip by ... broken by an occasional dance in the wonderful oak ballroom ..." In 1958, the Department of Transport proposed a route of a southern bypass to Aston Clinton traversing a section of the park. However, this proposal was rejected because of the environmental damage to the park. The alternative fate for the house was not far away. Buckinghamshire County Council acquired the house and park in three lots from 1959 to 1967. The house was demolished and Green Park Training Centre built in its place. Today nothing remains of the former mansion; the only reminder of its existence is the balustrading which once circled the garden at the front of the house. The wooded parkland is still there and features of the formal gardens can be found among the undergrowth.

Photographs taken before demolition, for the National Buildings Record, afford a chance to look at the exterior of the house in detail and to come to some conclusion about the location of the original 18th-century house. It could not have been part of the south east front, facing the canal, because, at that time, there was no access from that direction. On the north west frontage, facing the village, the square extension on the right-hand side was a later addition to the house by the Rothschild family. That leaves the portion projecting forward from the conservatory on the north east corner of the house. Its architecture was different to that of the rest of the building, it faced the village and would have been in the right position for the old carriage drive from the Turnpike. A large bow window opened onto a flight of steps out onto the grounds, which, as we have seen, were added in the 1850s. A projection can be seen on the north east side with a flight of steps. This may well have been the old entrance and I suggest that it marked the limit of the 1850s house and that the remainder of that wing, coming forward to the south east front, was added by Sir Anthony.
